“According to the Buddha dharma and according to its instructions, guides, we become aware that there is more to this quest, or this journey of finding essence or meaning in our life, that liberation is not everything. According to the ways of Buddhas and Bodhisattvas, there is in fact a method or a way where we can focus on accumulations and dedicating them, aiming them towards something that is timeless, towards something that is immeasurable, towards something that is almost, in a way, unlimited in terms of its benefit. And that method would be none other than using or directing our mind towards what is known as changchub sem in Tibetan or bodhicitta in Sanskrit, the English translation of which is ‘enlightened mind’, or the generating of our own mind towards enlightened phenomena”

Karmapa

These teachings come from our Root Guru and we as disciples must do our best to take it to heart and focus on it. The main essence of the teaching is gaining wisdom and compassion through the teachings and accumulating merits. The retreat of 4-armed chenrigzig will be our reminder to the teachings and to generate our bodhichitta.
